

DISASTER RECOVERY & BUSINESS CONTINUITY

EXPECT THE UNEXPECTED

DON'T LET AN OBSTAC

NATURAL DISASTERS

Fire, Flood, Rain, Snow, Ice, Hurricane, Tornado, Earthquake, etc.

Keeping employees away from the office, and causing power outages and physical destruction, the effects of mother nature's force can be devastating. But, by enabling employees to work from remote sites, and ensuring your data is replicated and accessible offsite can prevent a natural disaster from derailing your business.

MAN-MADE DISASTERS

Terrorism, Vandalism, Theft, Virus, Malware, etc.

When it comes to protecting your business from malicious threats, the best offense truly is a good defense. Secure your sensitive information from intrusive attacks, and barricade your networks from viruses and malware. Ensuring secure, reliable data backups in a central location will help recovery efforts in case of physical loss or theft of hardware, or failure caused by end-user errors.

PROBLEMS WITH FACILITIES

Power/Internet Outage, AC/Heating, Gas Leak, Electrical, Fire, etc.

Just because your office is inaccessible — for any number of unforeseen reasons — doesn't mean your business needs to be closed off, too. Enabling remote access and centralized data storage empowers employees to maintain productivity outside of the physical office.

CLE KEEP YOU DOWN

Time lost to a disastrous event can mean lost opportunities, lost sales, and lost customers. Minimize the impact.

It's not a question of if, but when disaster will strike. And then the first order of business is how you'll react. With a proactive plan for recovery, you can rebound faster and keep your business moving forward. By implementing business continuity components, to ensure remote data and application availability, redundant data backup, and recovery methods, you'll be safeguarding your business against any number of possible scenarios. You'll prevent lost revenue, maintain your responsiveness to customers, ensure productivity, and meet regulations.
